GCFLearnFree Invites Learners to become GCF Ambassadors

Learners Can Share Their Stories Seamlessly Via Video

(Raleigh, NC) – GCFLearnFree, an online-based educational organization, is seeking GCF Ambassadors by asking learners to submit videos explaining how they’ve been helped by the organization. Users can submit videos showcasing how they’ve used the organization’s free programs to add to their skill sets, get new jobs, and improve the quality of their lives.

Videos can be submitted via the site’s existing Give Use Feedback! link, which is accessible at the footer of every page at GCFLearnFree. Selected ambassadors will be featured in GCFLearnFree’s marketing and promotional materials – including on its website and social media channels – which will potentially be seen by millions of learners around the world.

“We get so many positive notes from people who have gotten jobs, received promotions at work, and improved the quality of their lives after learning with us. Video gives them another avenue to tell us how they’ve been helped,” says Jessica Meadows Rich, curriculum coordinator. “The idea is to be able to share this with others who may benefit from using our site.”

To share your story with video, visit gcflearnfree.org/educators/give-us-feedback. For more information on becoming a GCF Ambassador, watch this video: youtu.be/F-3RR680kvc.
